

Further deregulation is going in the wrong direction. I strongly urge you to reconsider. The amount of original local programing available is already very scarce, this would put the final nail in the coffin.

What on earth are you thinking? Do you want us to end up with one company controlling all the news in the United States? Our news coverage is already a joke. A good example is that none of the major media (TV, Newspapers, Magazines) is mentioning this proposed deregulation. Could it be because they want this one to slip through without any fanfare?

I don't want any more national programing for local radio and tv? To answer my own question, very possibly. I understand how this benefits already large corporations, but what about the public? The FCC is supposed to serve the public's best interests! I can't possibly see how this serves the public interest.
